

ONLINE MEETING ETIQUETTE: 5 Tips for Conducting Virtual Meetings

Is your team more accustomed to connecting in person? Here are five ways to “meet like a human” and conduct more engaging and productive virtual meetings with your colleagues or clients.

LOOK AT THE CAMERA

Sometimes this feels a bit weird, but when you have something to say, look right into your webcam. It makes the other meeting attendees - whether your own team or your clients - feel more connected to you because you appear to be looking right at them instead of somewhere over their shoulders.

SMILE & NOD

It's easy to accidentally appear solemn or robotic in a virtual meeting. Smile a bit more than usual and nod at the commentary of your fellow meeting attendees - just as you would in person. Behaving as you would in person helps keep dialogue flowing and ensures attendees stay engaged throughout the meeting.

MUTE DISTRACTIONS

Mute your microphone when you're not speaking. This helps you to avoid feedback, babies, dogs, food wrappers, loud roommates and other background sounds that make it hard to hear and distracting for other meeting attendees.

RESPOND THOUGHTFULLY

Compensate for the shortcomings of meeting virtually by making sure people feel heard. Listen and respond appropriately to others' commentary. They'll still be able to pick up on your energy through your voice, facial cues and thoughtful comments about their input.

RECAP & SAY GOODBYE

You may not be able to physically shake hands or bid your farewells around the conference table, but connecting at the end of a meeting is vital. Take a moment to review action items, ensure everyone is aligned and, if needed, set up your next meeting. Remember to actually say goodbye as you normally would in person!

Looking for more helpful tips and regulatory updates during this disruptive time? Visit Armanino's COVID-19 Resource Center for more on crisis management, remote workforce enablement, government aid and more.